THE SALEM BRIDGE PROPOSITION

The citizens of Salem by an almost unanimous vote have decided to issue bonds in the sum of $40,000 to build a bridge across the Willamette river, connecting the town directly with Polk county. The project is a considerable one for a community which does only a retail business and in which there is no great wealth. It involves an annual tax on all city property of about one and one-half mills for twenty years, to keep up the accruing interest, and the payment of the lump sum at the end of that period. It is, we believe, the largest public work yet undertaken by any town in Oregon, Portland excepted, and is highly creditable to the people of Salem who, though always credited with many virtues, have not been regarded as especially enterprising. They will find the investment an excellent one for it will make a large district of Polk county, heretofore barred by the river, directly tributary to Salem and will increase the business of the town to an extent that will much more than compensate the extra taxation. The very effort required to put this project through will serve as a stimulant to the local business community and will be a positive advantage to the town.

The amount proposed to be given to this enterprise by Salem will not be sufficient and it is proposed to ask Polk county to contribute $7500. That part of the county lying near Salem favors the proposition as a matter of course. A bridge would give to that district easy and direct communication with a large market and be a very important business as well as a desirable social advantage. Other parts of the county object on the ground that a bridge, while a local advantage to one district, would really hurt the county by drawing business from the local towns. "They object," says a local paper, "to being taxed simply that Salem may be fed." This is a narrow view of the matter, and one which we hope will not prevail. It should be borne in mind that whatever will help a district will help the county by an increase of taxable property. Besides, close connection between Salem and the Polk county towns would stimulate that rivalry which is not only the life of trade, but a promoter of general prosperity. Farmers who may choose between markets are likely to get better prices for their stuff and to get better terms in the matters of purchase. These general considerations are worth attention quite apart from the considerations of fair dealing which gives the district near Salem a claim upon the county funds to which it is a contributor.

We hope to see the bridge built and hope that it may be built by the public, so that it will be a free thoroughfare. If by any mischance it should be built by a private company, there will be a vexatious tax in the form of tolls. And in the long run it will cost the people much more than if they did the work at the public charge and make the bridge free.

A MATTER OF LIFE AND DEATH

The case which has just terminated in the commitment of Geismardo, self-confessed [illegible], quack and general fraud, to the state's prison for a term of three years, furnishes a new motive, or rouses new interest in a motive long existing, for legislation regulating the practice of medicine in this state. The last question as to the necessity for regulation of this important matter ought certainly to be removed by the disclosures of this case. At the present time any pretender, of whatever professions he chooses to put forth, may with impunity cheat people of their money or lure them to physical ruin. There is no protection for ignorance or credulity and only the mere possibility of redress after irreparable injury has been accomplished in cases where malpractice can be proved. Practically the public is at the mercy of adventurers of the Geismardo stamp. In nearly every other state in the Union now there are laws prohibiting persons not scientifically skilled in the theory and practice of medicine from tampering with human life. Before engaging as a practitioner, a doctor must demonstrate to competent authority, either by presenting a reliable diploma of graduation or by examination, or by both, that he is qualified as a physician. To those who are fit for the office they profess and the responsibilities they seek, this is no hardship, while it is a perfect protection against fraud and quackery. There ought to be some such regulation in Oregon. We are overrun by adventurers who having been driven out of other states by laws recently enacted, find here an asylum. Geismardo was one of these refugees, and there are others among us equally ignorant and infamous.

In opposition to laws proposed to remedy this evil there is always the sentiment of many people for old practitioners who are not graduates in medicine. Many doctors among us are not qualified in a technical sense, and yet, from long years of experience, combined with reading and native sense, are useful men in their way. To throw these men out would be unjust, of course. It would besides be a hardship to many country districts not able to maintain skilled physicians, but which are fairly well served by men who combine "doctoring" with some other business. It is not necessary to turn these men out of practice. A commission could be organized with large discretionary powers, or there might be a general provision covering the case of irregular physicians of long practice.

THE CRANKS OF HISTORY

The recent suicide of Louis, the crazy king of Bavaria, was not unexpected, and since his recovery was hopeless is not to be regretted. King Louis was always an eccentric person, a crank with a crown on his head, spending the royal revenues recklessly on art and music. It was under the patronage and at the cost of this king that the great composer Wagner presented his great masterpieces in operatic music. Insanity has been a not uncommon malady among kings. The [illegible] to indulge the worst passions of human nature without [illegible] for the prizes [illegible] marriages and [illegible] by blood [illegible] are sufficient [illegible] that royalty has not [illegible] crazy and frequently [illegible] to that class of unbalanced, though sometimes exceptionally vigorous intellects we call cranks. Charles the Simple of France, Henry the Sixth and George the Third of England, Peter the Third and Paul of Russia were subject to periodical attacks of mental derangement. There was an insane taint in the Roman emperors Tiberius, Caligula, Nero, Claudius, Domitian and Commodus which expressed itself by the brutality of unreasonable and wanton cruelty. Caligula would massacre a squad of suspects after supper, just as President Cleveland might direct the Marine band to play the best music. The faces of these monsters suggest the insane type. So in modern times we may count Peter the Great, Philip the Second, "Bloody" Mary, the Duke of Alva, Catherine de Medici, Charles the Ninth of France, all persons capable of cruelty for simple cruelty's sake, were unquestionably persons of an insane taint; they are among the royal cranks of history. Frederick William of Prussia, the father of Frederick the Great, was another of these cruel royal cranks. Christina of Sweden, and Gustavus the Third were so eccentric as to justify the explanation of partial insanity. Edward the Second and Richard the Second of England were feeble-minded and the royal families of Spain and Portugal have been prolific in royal imbeciles from the days of Don Carlos, the crazy son of Philip Second. The famous French historian, Taine, has a plausible theory that the sanguinary leaders of the great French revolution were really cranks. The transient madness caused by chronic misery had made the people for the time the tractable tools of these crazy leaders. To illustrate—the brain and genius of the French revolution refused to join the terrorists. Mirabeau, who alone had eloquence, courage and physique enough to have ridden and guided this whirlwind of righteous wrath and revolt against seven hundred years of awful tyranny, died in the early morning of this revolution. Had he lived he might have led the Girondists, and would have conducted them not to the scaffold, as did the poetic-minded enthusiast Vergniaud, but to victory, for he was not only an orator of Webster's power, but had a Websterian physical courage and combativeness, a Websterian impressiveness of stature and presence. When Mirabeau died there was no longer an able man at the wheel, and the ship of state began to drift into breakers and pound on the rocks. The Girondists were all poets, artists, philosophers, dreamers and critics; there was not a man of outdoor courage and executive force among them. They were good material for martyrs, but were not fit to deal with a crazy, hungry mob, and so they were immolated by the savage pack of Jacobins, because they did not know enough to oppose mad dogs with something more substantial than orations. Of the Jacobins, Danton might have been the Mirabeau, for he was the only eloquent man of sane mind among them, but he became disgusted with the bloody work and instead of leaping to leadership when he could he was seduced by the blandishments of a young wife to retire from public life just long enough to allow the scepter of power to pass into the hands of cranks like Robespierre and St. Just, and he reappeared too late and lost his head. Nobody can read the story of the terrorists' last hours without feeling that Taine is right when he says they were cranks, the Guiteaus of their day, sincere, as all lunatics are sincere; they were the cock-eyed men of destiny, they could look at nothing straight, his describes Robespierre, St. Just and Marat. In America such men would be counted with Schwab, Herr Most, Denis Kearney, August Spies, O'Dynamite Rossa, with that queer crowd of creatures who are a strange mixture of laughable fool and incendiary knave. The man who runs amuck against the common sense of the intelligent thinking million is either playing a part he knows is wrong, or else he is a sincere crank, and this theory of Taine explains the monsters of ancient and modern times. No sane man is cruel without a motive. Napoleon shot the Duc de Enghien, it was cruel and yet it was sound state policy and a sane act. The Bourbons were constantly plotting his murder and he warned them to desist by shooting the first man of their family that fell into his hands, but the cruelty of the cranks of history, as we have said, is the cruelty of unreason and senseless inhumanity. Julius Cæsar for state reasons was sometimes severe, but he never committed wanton cruelties for cruelty's sake; he was clement to his factional foes; no cold blooded massacres followed his success. He was severe within the lines of sanity. So Napoleon, Frederick the Great, Cromwell, Henry the Eighth and Queen Elizabeth were capable of extraordinary severity for state reasons, but were never insanely cruel for pure cruelty's sake, as were the persons described as the cranks of history. The Irish dynamite and dagger devils belong to this class of cranks; they acted like Charles Lamb's Chinaman that burnt up his barn and his house in order to roast a pig. Then we have another class of cranks, men of genius with a bee in their bonnets. Stonewall Jackson, and Chinese Gordon were both men of remarkable military talents and yet both were so strongly tinctured with fatalism that nothing but their extraordinary military genius saved them from contempt as religious cranks. They were monomaniacs. They would ride into battle as calmly as to a fox hunt, as fearless and imperturbable in their fatalism as the Saracen who rode into battle crying "God is great," and believing that if he fell in battle for the crescent he would sup with Mahomet in paradise. Gordon told Wolseley before he left for Khartoum that he would succeed against any odds if God willed it, that otherwise no force however large would succeed. Jackson at Harper's Ferry solemnly bid his prisoners cheer up and remember that "it would not have happened if God had not willed it." Gordon and Jackson were Christian fatalists as sincere as any wild rider that followed the Mahdi. It has been said there is but a light line between genius and insanity. Gordon, Stonewall Jackson, Edward Irving, the eloquent Scotch preacher who fascinated Carlyle and other able men, Swedenborg, Chatterton, the poet, William Blake, were curious cases of great powers marred by a strange drift to mental delusions and illusions. Even Napoleon was a fatalist, he had a singular confidence in his star that amounted to superstition, and neither Byron or Carlyle were quite free of a certain intense morbidity that stands for a drift toward insanity. Indeed few men of marked genius in the world's history would be rated as level headed tested by the ordinary standards that we apply to determine mental serenity, soundness and practical wisdom. There is a flaw in their diamond, a fly in their amber.

THE PARDONING POWER

The true solution of the question of the pardoning power seems to us to be this. Secure to the prisoner the right at any time to make application to the supreme court for a new trial, and thus any convict who could make a fair showing of probable innocence from new developments, who could prove any injustice in law or fact, would be granted retrial by the court, and with this security against errors in conviction we would endow no one with the pardoning power, for the largest safety to the greatest number is best assured by having all men who can make no proof of unfair trial or unjust conviction serve out their full term of sentence. This might occasionally, perhaps, cause a seemingly individual hardship, but the wrong and injury to the safety and good conduct of society resulting from the exercise of the pardoning power is so great and so frequently illustrated, the individual cases of infrequent hardship must be ignored in obedience to that highest function of all government and all legislation, the supreme happiness and security of the state. The plea of suffering wives and children deserves no [illegible] consideration. There is probably not a poor, ignorant pauper [illegible] conviction means all [illegible] woe and [illegible] want to the poor woman [illegible] wife and the wee but children that call him father. But one of the most powerful deterrents of crime is doubtless the moving spectacle of the [illegible] hunger and want brought upon the [illegible] members of a family by the wrong [illegible] of its only representative, and to [illegible] indulgent [illegible] if these were [illegible] the civil [illegible] of imprisonment would leave few inmates [illegible] outside the warden and his turnkeys. A convict who has family ties is sure to be very wretched in prison; he misses his loving wife, his sweet children, and a man of but moderate affections will think twice before he will risk the loss of the personal liberty that includes freedom to enjoy the society of his wife and children. A prison is a bad place to be sick in; it is a gloomy place to be in, and it ought to be understood by men who contemplate crime that if caught they will stay in prison until discharged by death or expiration of sentence. Let it once be understood that a pardon can be easily obtained on the plea that the fellow is desperately or hopelessly sick, is very old, infirm, broken in spirit and you have robbed punishment of its best power by stern example and pitiless discipline to restrain men from crime by the very repulsiveness of prison life. A convict once planted in the penitentiary the executive or board of pardons should refuse to break jail for him with a pardon, no matter how plausible the pretext for clemency. Punishment is worthless when it becomes understood that pardon, the key to all the doors of the strongest prison, can be had for the asking by an influential convict, who has lost his honor, without losing all his friends. It is the disposition too much of the public to plead for leniency, not to convicts, who have sinned largely because of ignorance, vicious parental surroundings, inherited moral taints, mental weakness that has been educated to evil from a cradle of illiteracy and moral darkness, but for leniency to those who have sinned not from notorious lack of early light, but in spite and in contempt of the light of respectable surroundings and humane influences. The sound ethics of Christ ought to be the rule, of him to whom much is given much should be required, he shall be beaten with many stripes, but of him to whom little has been given little shall be required; he shall be beaten with few stripes. But modern criminal administration is wiser than Christ; it reverses his order of humane justice, it gives the poor, the ignorant, the illiterate, the feeble minded, the utterly friendless, the severity of the law. There is seldom any appeal for leniency in such cases. Still less is clemency afterwards invoked in shape of a call for pardon. Not that it is wise to relax the severity of the statutes in such cases but if it is sound state policy to punish severely those born and bred children of darkness it is certainly sound policy to measure out stern justice to those born and bred children of light who have deliberately elected to sin against light. It should not be a question of money and influence whether punishment for crime is swift, sharp, and inexorable, or dilatory, tender or short. "Plating sin with the gold" of illegitimate social influence so as to make the "strong lance of justice hurtless break" breeds increase of crime by reducing right and wrong, punishment or pardon to a mere struggle of influence to dodge the full weight of the avenging axe of the law, or to turn its edge by a successful cry for clemency.

WARDS OF THE PUBLIC.

Recent dispatches announce disgusting facts of mismanagement and abuse in the care of the St. Louis work house. These disgraceful outrages on decency and humanity have taken place in every state in this Union, and are sure to take place in absence of a state commission of visitation, who are authorized and obliged by law to visit all public institutions frequently and without warning of their visit. Convicts, paupers, insane persons, all persons that are included under the title of the wards of the public, are sure to be abused and neglected if the superintendents of prisons, alms-houses and insane asylums are exempt from unexpected and unannounced visitation on part of a state commission of high character. It is human nature to neglect and abuse people who practically have no friends, which is the case with the wards of the public. Within a few years there have been frightful exposures of mismanagement in Ohio, New York, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Maine, Illinois and Massachusetts. Gov. Robinson of Massachusetts personally interfered on one occasion to rescue a public ward from the hands of a brutal keeper, whom he found beating him without mercy and without warrant. If the superintendent is inhuman of course outrages will take place, if he is philanthropic he is apt to be inefficient and careless, and his under keepers and attendants abuse their authority in his absence or practice on his confidence cunningly when he is present. There is no way to prevent physical torture or illy care of the wards of the public except by making the superintendent both humane and vigilant through the knowledge that he is liable at any moment to be visited by a committee of visitation and inspection, who will give him neither time nor opportunity to hide his inhumanity or his dirty work.

THE TACOMA VIEW OF IT

Discussing the changes likely to follow completion of the Cascade branch of the Northern Pacific the Tacoma News says:

They [illegible] of Southeastern Washington [illegible] and [illegible] of which has [illegible] of the [illegible] traders. It is [illegible] that the entire business [illegible] by the [illegible] will be transferred at once [illegible] to Portland and [illegible]. We must [illegible] Portland and the O. R. & N. transportation company will make a desperate effort to retain their grip. They will grant concessions such as they have not heretofore been compelled to make. Business relations have been established with Portland houses that can not be sundered peremptorily and suddenly. The business of that entire county will be rapidly diverted in this direction. Portland will labor under too great disadvantage and will gradually lose her hold upon this trade. A large portion of which will at once take the new track. Furthermore, it requires no unusual presumption to foreshadow as a natural sequence the transfer of a large amount of wholesale business to Tacoma—a thing which will be rendered absolutely necessary to meet the demands of trade in the inland empire. San Francisco wholesale merchants will establish wholesale houses here, as a few of them have already done temporarily in Portland in order to hold their trade with the merchants in that vicinity. Local establishments will also develop into first-class wholesale houses. Gradually but surely Portland merchants will lose their hold upon the business of that territory, the regular lines of traffic having been diverted in another direction.

These statements are amusing in their serene assumption, but they have some interest, nevertheless, as the Tacoma view of it.

In answer to the general sentiment of the business community, a special meeting of the board of trade has been called for to-morrow night to consider the general question involved in the "resolutions" adopted at the meeting of last Thursday. The meeting referred to was irregular, and its action clearly illegal and fraudulent. The "resolutions" were not considered at all, and it seems that their import was not understood even by the man who (as a favor to another member who did not wish to appear in the matter) introduced them. They do not represent the sentiment or the interest of our business men. The general question of Northern Pacific forfeiture will come up for consideration at this meeting and it is desired to have a full attendance and a free expression of opinion.

MAIL ROBBERS ARRESTED—Yesterday [illegible] marshal from [illegible] with Henry Esmond and [illegible] Robbins [illegible] charged with [illegible] Last winter Esmond [illegible] carrying the mail between [illegible] by means of a [illegible] pouch was [illegible] opened [illegible] dexterously removed [illegible] replaced so that [illegible] was not [illegible] the pouch had been tampered with [illegible] registered letter containing [illegible] was found to be missing, and [illegible] afterwards Esmond and Robbins left the [illegible] The postal authorities kept [illegible] nevertheless went to work actively to [illegible] the matter up. It was placed in the hands of [illegible] Tracy, who after working [illegible] obtained a clue [illegible] the case for [illegible] causing the arrest [illegible] to justify him in causing the arrest [illegible] and Esmond. They were both found [illegible] Willow creek, Baker [illegible] Oregon. The men were working at farm places about a mile apart—Robbins for [illegible] named Cole, and Esmond for a farmer [illegible] When taken into custody by Richardson [illegible] Marshal both they both expressed the [illegible] surprise and denied all knowledge of the affair. [illegible] is said, however, that there is a good [illegible] against them. Robbins, who is charged [illegible] an accomplice in the transaction, being [illegible] to have changed a $100 bill that was sent [illegible] registered letter that was stolen [illegible] is a young man, but [illegible] to bear a not over good reputation [illegible] Esmond is a hard looking citizen, and, according to all accounts, is as bad as he looks. The accused were committed on the order of commissioner Paul R. Deady, and will be taken from here to Boise City for trial. Esmond, when questioned about the affair, in the county jail yesterday, said he delivered the mail pouch in good order.

FROM ASHLAND TO THE SEA—Commencing next Wednesday and continuing up to [illegible] evening the excursion from all points on the O. & C. R. R., east and west side, given by [illegible] Christian church for the benefit of the [illegible] building fund, will arrive in the city from the South on their way to the ocean. Every [illegible] being first class the celebrated Olympian [illegible] chartered to take the party to Astoria, Canby and Ilwaco leaving Portland Thursday at 2 P. M., arriving [illegible] at 8 A. M. and Saturday at 2 P. M., arriving Friday at 3 P. M., Monday at 8 A. M. and [illegible] P. M. Rates are very low, for example only [illegible] from Ashland to ocean and return. The [illegible] West will take such as desire it to the Cascade and way points leaving Portland Friday at [illegible] A. M. arriving back about 7 P. M. A nominal charge of [illegible] 0 and 25 cents, will be made for the Cascade trip. The favorable time of going, returning and the fact that it gives four days at the ocean with privilege of spending July 4th in Portland to witness the grand celebration, together with the extremely low rate, [illegible] assurance that it will draw. It has been extensively advertised up the valley by large handsome posters for the past three weeks, many business men from the towns as well as farmers and others have signified their intentions of going. The rain of yesterday [illegible] against this at [illegible] the [illegible] excursionists [illegible]

HIBBS [illegible]—Isaac N. Hibbs, ex-postmaster of Lewiston, [illegible] is now under going at this place [illegible] to the amount of [illegible] He skipped [illegible] bought a hotel [illegible] and settled down in business. The [illegible] pursued him [illegible] however and he was given [illegible] of the British province on extradition [illegible] Hibbs was [illegible] on one count and acquitted and was then [illegible] taken the [illegible] some other [illegible] which his wife claimed [illegible] had a writ of habeas corpus issued from [illegible] court and [illegible] Hibbs brought before [illegible] Deady, who [illegible] him into custody [illegible] months ago, and ever since has been confined in the territorial pen [illegible] at Boise City. His incarceration has told [illegible] general health and he is very much [illegible] down. There are 40 counts or charges against Hibbs, but it is probable that he will be tried on one or two of them. His trial was concluded this week. Postal inspector J. Murphy assisted materially in working [illegible] Hibbs case and is one of the principal witnesses for the government.

STEAMBOAT RACE.—Yesterday afternoon launch Mikado had a brush with the steamer Sellwood and came out second best. The [illegible] before Capt. Fisher and Engineer Fellows [illegible] several hours "tightenin' up" the Sellwood's machinery and she was in prime condition to tackle anything on the river, which, however, she generally is. The Mikado was waiting at the boat house, one block below the Sellwood's landing, and as the latter cast off her lines the Mikado came puffing up behind and gave a whistle as much as to say, "clear the track or you'll get run over." Engineer Fellows heard the toot, and without waiting for orders, threw the throttle wide open. In about ten seconds the Sellwood gained three lengths on the Mikado. Not wishing to beat the Mikado out of sight, Capt. Fisher slowed his boat down to a regular walking gait, made five landings, then ran clear around the Mikado when landed at Lambert's, below Milwaukie. In [illegible] he made seven landings and then beat the Mikado to Oswego. The Mikado is a fine boat, and for her size very fast, but she does not want to race with the Hoss propeller on "the creek."

A LIVE INSTITUTION—After examining [illegible] advance sheets of the July number of the West Shore we have no hesitancy in saying that [illegible] magazine although always good will have few equals hereafter. The pictures are produced in colors, and those in the July number are but a fair sample as Mr. Samuel, the publisher, assures us of what the West Shore will [illegible] from this on. By its liberal policy the West Shore has grown to be one of the largest [illegible] paying institutions in this city, and not only produces that handsome and useful magazine but manufactures all kinds of lithographed stationery and bank work. A large order is being filled for a bank 1[illegible]00 miles from [illegible] and this in competition with [illegible] houses, Portland is to be congratulated [illegible] West Shore establishment is located here. [illegible] proprietor [illegible] before [illegible] Portland imprint shall appear on [illegible] used by eastern business firms.

[illegible]—A few gentlemen at large expense and with commendable [illegible] have been vigorously arranging, during the [illegible] two weeks, for the opening of the public pleasure garden to be conducted as a thoroughly [illegible] respectable resort. It is [illegible] the old rink block, corner Fourth and Pine. It is the design of the Olympic Garden Co. to open and maintain a place of amusement where ladies and children may go for [illegible] noon or evening without fear of being [illegible] or the sense of propriety shocked. [illegible] sports that tend to develop the muscle [illegible] improve the physique will be one of the features of the garden. The pleasant [illegible] accomplishment of horseback riding [illegible] be taught by competent professors from New York. The gardens will open on the [illegible] special attractions. The advertised [illegible] word [illegible] itself sufficient [illegible] the grand [illegible] making [illegible] amusements.

VERY LOW TIDE.—Next Friday morning [illegible] o'clock will occur the lowest tide during the season, and it will continue to run at very low several days fifty minutes later each morning. The reason of this extreme low water is [illegible] new moon occurs at a few minutes after [illegible] M. just at low tide the night before, Thursday July 1, and the moon being in perigee (which being interpreted so Webfeet can understand it means nearest the earth) the attraction of [illegible] body is greater than usual, which lifts up [illegible] Pacific ocean in the middle to a great [illegible] making the water very scarce at the shore [illegible] terms used here may not be the most scientific but they will be sufficient to cause campers [illegible] others at the seaside to be on hand at [illegible] holes left far out by the receding waters, [illegible] to catch crabs and dig clams.

INDIAN DOCTOR MURDERED.—Says the [illegible] Ledger: A letter from Wapinitia gives information of an atrocious murder which occurred on the Indian reservation, on the morning of the 14th. The place where the [illegible] took place is called Wena. The Indian [illegible] was named Tittawasa. An Indian named [illegible] had a sick child which grew worse, and for [illegible] reason, together with an old grudge against the doctor, they thought they would [illegible] him. [illegible] and four or five other Indians caught him and threw him down and cut his throat from ear to ear, beating him on the [illegible] with stones. This, it is said, makes [illegible] doctors they have killed in the last few years [illegible] time a stop is put to such acts in a [illegible] tribe of Indians.

JUMPED INTO THE RIVER.—A young fellow dressed in the garb of a workingman [illegible] from the Albina ferry boat, on the east side at half past 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, [illegible] river. The boatmen fished him out and brought him to this side. Notice was sent to the [illegible] station by telephone from Koshland's warehouse. A wagon was sent down into which the [illegible] was placed by officers Wilmer and R[illegible] They conveyed him to the city jail, where he was booked "to dry out." He showed evidence of being a little off and the only name he would give was Peter.

MAIL ROBBERS ARRESTED.—Yesterday Geo. [illegible] Root, a deputy U. S. marshal from Idaho, arrived here with Henry Esmond and Perry Robbins, both of whom are charged with robbing the U. S. mail. Last winter Esmond was engaged in carrying the mail between Idaho City and Placerville, Idaho. On one of the trips a mail sack was opened by means of a staple on the opposite side of the pouch to which the lock is attached being dexterously removed and then replaced so that for a time it was not noticed that the pouch had been tampered with. About the same time a registered letter containing some money was found to be missing, and not long afterwards Esmond and Robbins left the territory. The postal authorities kept quiet, but nevertheless went to work actively to look the matter up. It was placed in the hands of government inspector Tracy, who after working on the case for awhile obtained a clue sufficient to justify him in causing the arrest of Robbins and Esmond. They were both found near [illegible]'s postoffice, Willow creek, Baker county, Oregon. The men were working at farming on places about a mile apart—Robbins for a man named Cole, and Esmond for a farmer named Richardson. When taken into custody by Deputy Marshal Root they both expressed their surprise and denied all knowledge of the affair. It is said, however, that there is a good case against them. Robbins, who is charged only as an accomplice in the transaction, being known to have changed a $100 bill that was sent in the registered letter that was stolen. Robbins is a young man, but is said to be a [illegible] of not over good reputation. Esmond is a hard-looking citizen, and, according to all accounts, is as bad as he looks. The accused were committed on the order of U. S. Commissioner Pan. R. Deady, and will be taken from here to Boise City for trial. Esmond, when questioned about the affair, in the county jail yesterday, said he delivered the mail pouch in good order.

FROM ASHLAND TO THE SEA.—Commencing next Wednesday and continuing up to Friday evening the excursion from all points on the O. & C. R. R., east and west side, given by the Christian church for the benefit of the Portland building fund, will arrive in the city from the south on their way to the ocean. Everything being first class the celebrated Olympian is secured to take the party to Astoria, Fort Canby and Ilwaco, leaving Portland Thursday at 11 A. M. and Saturday at 2 P. M., arriving back Friday at 3 P. M., Monday at 3 A. M. and at 11 A. M. Rates are very low, for example, only $11 from Ashland to ocean and return. The Wide West will take such as desire it to the Cascades and way points leaving Portland Friday at 7:30 A. M. arriving back about 7 P. M. A nominal charge of 50 and 25 cents, will be made for the round trip. The favorable time of going and returning and the fact that it gives four days at the ocean, with privilege of spending July 5th in Portland to witness the grand celebration, together with the extremely low rates give assurance that it will "draw." It has been extensively advertised up the valley by large and handsome posters for the past three weeks and many business men from the towns as well as farmers and others have signified their intention of going. The rain of yesterday insures against dust and smoke those two chief pests to excursionists and tourists.

HIBBS' TRIAL.—Isaac N. Hibbs, ex-postmaster of Lewiston, Idaho, is now undergoing trial at that place for forging postal money orders to the amount of thousands of dollars. Hibbs skipped to Victoria, bought a hotel near there and settled down in business. The authorities followed him, however, and he was gotten out of the British province on extradition papers. Hibbs was tried on one count and acquitted, and was then being taken through Oregon to some other point which his wife claimed was to be in an eastern state, so to prevent this she got a writ of habeas corpus issued from the U. S. court and had Hibbs brought before Judge Deady, who remanded him into custody. This occurred some months ago, and ever since Hibbs has been confined in the territorial penitentiary at Boise City. His incarceration has told on his general health and he is very much broken down. There are 401 counts or charges against him, but it is probable that he will be only tried on one or two of them. His trial will be concluded this week. Postal inspector J. J. Tracy assisted materially in working up the case and is one of the principal witnesses for the government.

STEAMBOAT RACE.—Yesterday afternoon the steamer Mikado had a brush with the steamer Sellwood and came out second best. The night before Capt. Fisher and Engineer Fellows spent several hours "tightnin' up" the Sellwood's machinery, and she was in prime condition to do anything on the river, which, however, she generally is. The Mikado was waiting at the boat house, one block below the Sellwood's landing, and as the latter cast off her lines the Mikado came puffing up behind and gave a whistle as much as to say, "clear the track or I'll get run over." Engineer Fellows heard the toot, and without waiting for orders, threw the throttle wide open. In about ten seconds the Sellwood gained three lengths on the Mikado. Not wishing to beat the Mikado out of sight, Capt. Fisher slowed his boat down to her regular walking gait, made five landings and then ran clear around the Mikado when he landed at Lambert's, below Milwaukie. In all he made seven landings and then beat the Mikado to Oswego. The Mikado is a fine boat, and for her size very fast, but she does not want to race with the boss propeller on "the creek."

A LIVE INSTITUTION.—After examining advance sheets of the July number of the West Shore we have no hesitancy in saying that the magazine although always good will have but few equals hereafter. The pictures are produced in colors, and those in the July number are but a fair sample so Mr. Samuel, the publisher, assures us of what the West Shore will be from this on. By its liberal policy the West Shore has grown to be one of the largest wage-paying institutions in this city, and not only publishes that handsome and useful magazine, but manufactures all kinds of lithographed stationery and bank work. A large order is just being filled for a bank 1700 miles from Portland, and this in competition with Chicago houses. Portland is to be congratulated that the West Shore establishment is located here. The proprietor is determined that before long the "Portland" imprint shall appear on stationery used by eastern business firms.

NEW ENTERPRISE.—A few gentlemen, at great expense and with commendable activity, have been vigorously arranging, during the past few weeks, for the opening to the public of a pleasure garden to be conducted as a thoroughly reputable and respectable resort. It is located in the old rink block, corner Fourth and Pine. It is the design of the Olympic Garden company to open and maintain a place of amusement where ladies and children may go for an afternoon or evening without fear of being insulted or their sense of propriety shocked. Athletic sports that tend to develop the muscles and improve the physique will be one of the features of the gardens. The pleasant and elegant accomplishments of horseback riding will be taught by a competent professor from New York. The gardens will open on the 5th with special attractions. The advertised broad-sword combat is, in itself, sufficient to crowd the grounds, without making mention of the other amusements.

THE LOW TIDE.—Next Friday morning at 6 o'clock will occur the lowest tide during the season, and it will continue to run out very low for several days fifty minutes later each morning. The reason of this extreme low water is that the new moon occurs at a few minutes after 5 P. M., just at low tide the night before, Thursday, July 1, and the moon being in perigee (which being interpreted so Webfeet can understand it, means nearest the earth) the attraction of that body is greater than usual, which lifts up the Pacific ocean in the middle to a great hight, leaving the water very scarce at the shore. The terms used here may not be the most scientific, but they will be sufficient to cause campers and others at the seaside to be on hand at the big tides left far out by the receding waters, ready to catch crabs and dig clams.

AN INDIAN DOCTOR MURDERED.—Says the West Lander: A letter from Wapinitia gives information of an atrocious murder which occurred on the Indian reservation, on the morning of the 14th. The place where the murder took place is called Wena. The Indian doctor was named Tittawasa. An Indian named Patts had a sick child which grew worse, and for this reason, together with an old grudge against the doctor, they thought they would kill him. So Patts and four or five other Indians caught him and threw him down and cut his throat from ear to ear, beating him on the head with stones. This, it is said, makes four doctors they have killed in the last few years. It is time a stop is put to such acts in a semi civilized tribe of Indians.

JUMPED INTO THE RIVER.—A young fellow dressed in the garb of a workingman jumped from the Albina ferry boat, on the east side, at about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, into the river. The boat hands fished him out and brought him to this side. Notice was sent to the police station by telephone from Koshland's warehouse. A wagon was sent down into which the man was placed by officers Wilmer and Robinson. They conveyed him to the city jail, where he was booked "to dry out." He showed evidence of being a little off and the only name he would give was Peter.

BOUGHT TWO FARMS.—I. W. Baird the proprietor of the minstrel company bearing his name which visited Portland recently, is "stuck" on Oregon, and, having confidence in the future of the state, has bought two farms near this city. One is the Tyce place, a mile and a half back of the Red house, and consists of eighty acres. The other is L. P. W. Quimby's stock farm of 160 acres in Washington county. He proposes to raise some fine horses and cattle on the place, and will make Oregon his summer residence. Mr Baird is now in the city, and will spend a week or more here. The company is now in the neighborhood of Jacksonville, and will go overland to California.

GOOD FOR CLATSOP.—Yesterday the management of the Christian church excursion on the Olympian July 1 to 5, inclusive, perfected arrangements to have the steamer Alice connect at Astoria with the Olympian on all the trips down as well as up for Clatsop. The regular ticket is good for Clatsop without extra charge if the holder sees that the word "Clatsop" is written across its face before purchasing. The close connection of the Alice both ways enables even those who go to Ilwaco on the Saturday trip to visit Ilwaco, Oysterville and Clatsop, see all the sights worth seeing, and get home Monday night.

VALUABLE WATCH STOLEN.—The bold, bad burglar is still abroad and plying his vocation industriously. Saturday night or early Sunday morning some fellow of this class, whose identity has not yet been discovered, entered the residence of Woodson Scoggin on Alder street, between Eleventh and Twelfth, and carried off Mr Scoggin's watch and $3). The watch is a fly-back second or stop watch and cost its owner $580 some years ago.

FARM HOUSE BURNED.—The residence of Wm. Harrison, situated three miles north of McCoy burned on Thursday of last week. All the "men folks" were working at some distance from the house when they discovered it in flames, and everything was destroyed before they could reach it. Mr Harrison had hung his coat, which contained $80 in greenbacks in one of the pockets, in a closet, just before going to work. The loss is over $1000, not insured.

RAIN.—Late Saturday night dark clouds blew up from the south, and toward midnight Portland was visited by very light showers. These continued throughout Sunday, but the precipitation was small—less than one-tenth of an inch in twenty-four hours. The showers extended as far up the valley as Eugene. No rain is reported from Roseburg. Indications are favorable for more rain to-day. It is needed all over Oregon.

THE EXCURSION TO ILWACO

Saturday's trip of the Olympian with the Pennsylvania and Ohioans and friends, though not large in point of numbers, due to various causes, was enjoyable in many ways, bringing together the members of the associations, who in this way became better acquainted. The transfer at Fort Canby was quite late resulting in the delay of the performance and ball at the new hall at Ilwaco which was opened on this occasion. The minstrels gave only a portion of the programme—a very clever performance for amateurs. Dancing was generally participated in and proved a treat, more particularly to the denizens of that locality, who seldom have an opportunity to do justice to an occasion of the kind. The visitors entered into the spirit of the affair and enjoyed looking on besides tripping the light fantastic. Sunday was passed in various ways according to the inclination of individuals. At Canby the big boat made an effort to pull down a weak portion of the wharf, but it proved still strong enough to withstand the great power brought to bear and the strong lines were snapped like threads, while the piles to which the lines were fastened broke off at the extremes like so many reeds. On the up trip the Roseburg Junior band more than surprised the excursionists, their work showing great improvement over that done while marching. They are well advanced and do splendid work. The Olympian arrived at her dock shortly after 12, and the trip was voted a success.

THIS IS WHAT A. B. STEINBACH & CO.,
—THE—
CLOTHIERS AND HATTERS,
Cor. First and Morrison Sts.,
CLAIM TO DO.

It is agreed by most men who profess to know anything about it, that when women get together for a chat the main topics discussed are dress, servants and children. Some vary these subjects with servants, children and dress, but in the opinion of most males dress forms the main topic of conversation among the fair sex. Men are supposed to treat the matter of custom and fashion with contempt, but as a matter of fact they do not. They give it more attention than they are willing to admit. Take the well formed man selecting a suit. Did any woman ever show greater concern about style, cut, finish, buttons, etc., than he does?

Knowing this, we have taken the utmost pains in the selection of our goods, and

WE GUARANTEE A PERFECT FIT.

Everyone knows that for Style, Fit and Finish we cannot be equalled.

We offer our patrons their choice of the best the markets afford at reasonable prices.

ALASKA AND THE ALASKANS.

The Creoles and the Bull Dogs of the North Pacific

Climate Like that of Kentucky in Winter—Mountains, Sea Islands, Rivers, and Other Information About the Territory

Mr. Sheldon Jackson, the general agent for education in Alaska, has presented a report to Secretary Lamar, writes "Carp," the Washington correspondent of the Cleveland Leader, in which he gives some very interesting facts relating to that country and its inhabitants. He says that the western part of Alaska is as far west of San Francisco as Maine is east, so that San Francisco is the great central city of the territories of the United States. He describes the extent of Alaska better than it has been done before. It is as large as all of the New England and Middle states, together with Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Kentucky and Tennessee. It is about one-sixth of the area of the whole United States, and it has a coast line twice as long as that of our Atlantic and Pacific shores. It is as far from the northern to the southern point of Alaska as from Maine to Florida, and an air line drawn from one end of Alaska to the other would be as long as the distance between Washington and California.

THE ALASKAN POPULATION

Still this vast territory has a population of 33,543, or only about one-sixth of that of the city of Cleveland, and 1902 of these are whites. About one half of the rest are Esquimaux and 1756 are called creoles, and are the descendants of native mothers by Russian fathers. The population of Alaska has a few of the characteristics of the Indians and they are a race entirely different from the Indian tribes of the United States. They have better brains and stronger muscles, and they yield readily to civilizing influences. They live, as a rule, in permanent, substantial homes and support themselves. They have great ambition to become Americanized, and the better class of them want to build American homes, possess American furniture, dress in American clothes and be American citizens.

SOME NATIVE CHARACTERISTICS

The Eskimo part of the population of Alaska is of a far different nature than is generally supposed by Americans. They are not small like the inhabitants of Greenland and Labrador, but are tall and muscular, many of them being over six feet in height. They have small black eyes, high cheek bones, large mouths, thick lips and fresh yellow complexions. Their hair is of a coarse brown and in many instances the men have full beards and mustaches. They are a good natured set of people, always smiling when spoken to, and they are fond of dancing, running, jumping and all athletic sports. They dress in the skins of animals, and buy, whenever they can, American clothing. The houses they live in have the outward appearance of circular mounds of earth covered with grass, with a small opening at the top for the escape of smoke. The entrance is a small door and narrow hallway to the main room, which is from twelve to twenty feet in diameter. These Alaska Eskimos eat chiefly meat and fish. They do not like salt at all, and while they will smack their lips over decayed fish or putrid oil, they will turn up their noses at a mouthful of the finest corned beef. They all smoke tobacco—men, women and children, and they have at one place an annual fair to which they come for hundreds of miles to trade.

THE CREOLES OF ALASKA

Are mixed up somewhat in their living with the Aleuts. There are about 2000 of these last in Alaska, and they occupy the Aleutian chain of islands. These men are smaller than the Eskimos, and they have black hair instead of brown. They look a great deal like the Japanese, and have many civilized instincts. Their houses consist of two or three rooms, and they use cooking stoves, crockery dishes, and have their feather beds covered with colored spreads. The walls of their houses are hung with colored pictures, and they light them with coal oil in glass lamps. They are fond of music, and in nearly every home you will find a hand organ, accordeon or a music box. They are fast becoming Americanized. They dress in American garments, and their women study the fashion plates and try to imitate the latest styles. Many of them can read, and most of them are members of the Russo Greek church. They ask a blessing at their meals, and when they bid good bye to their friends it is with a "God bless you." These people live in the great seal islands of Alaska.

THE ALASKA COMMERCIAL COMPANY

Pays the United States government $55,000 a year as an annual rental of these islands and it is allowed to take 100,000 seal skins every year upon which they pay a royalty of $262,500. The revenue of these islands during the past sixteen years have returned to the government more than half of the sum paid to Russia for the whole country. A great many of these Alaskans have good incomes and one village alone has a revenue of $100,000 a year from its sale of otter skins. This would make $5[illegible] for every man, woman and child in it. Another village gets $600 a year per family for the sale of sea otters. These Aleuts and Creoles respect the marriage relation which is not true of others of the Alaskan tribes.

The Tinnehs, who are more like the Indians than any of the other Alaskans, are polygamists and they discard and take wives at pleasure. They rarely have more than three wives, but often more than one. The Tinnehs bury their dead in boxes above the ground. They believe in witchcraft, and it is not an uncommon thing for them to kill their female babies.

THE BULLDOGS OF THE NORTH PACIFIC

Another tribe which practices polygamy are the Hydah who are tall, well formed fellows, noted for their bravery and ferocity. They are known as the bulldogs of the North Pacific, and they have not hesitated to attack and plunder English and American vessels. Among the Hydahs the husband buys his wife frequently while a mere girl. If she does not suit him he can return her and the price will be refunded. These Hydahs live in houses made of boards and one story in height. Their houses are forty or fifty feet square, with a fireplace in the center of the floor and a large hole in the roof for the escape of the smoke. Civilized costumes are now creeping in, and bedsteads, tables, stoves and dishes are becoming common. These Hydahs have what are known as totem sticks raised to protect their dwellings. These are carved logs from one to two feet in diameter and from twenty to sixty feet high. These are painted with horrible faces and figures and serve to drive away evil spirits. The Hydahs raise a great many potatoes and their country abounds in wild berries and deer. They keep these berries for winter use in fish oil.

THE CLIMATE OF ALASKA

Alaska has an arctic winter and a tropical summer. At Fort Yukon the thermometer often rises above 100 degrees in the summer and falls as low as 70 degrees below zero in the winter. Along the immense southern coast the climate is moist and warm, being in some of the islands like that of northwestern Scotland. At Sitka, where a record of the thermometer has been kept forty-five years, the mean temperature per year has been 43 degrees the year round, or 41 degrees in the spring, 54 degrees in the summer, 44 degrees in the fall and 32 degrees in the winter. The greatest degree of heat recorded in these forty-five years, was 87 degrees above and of cold 4 degrees below zero. It will thus be seen that the climate of southeastern Alaska has for forty-five years past been the average winter climate of Kentucky and West Virginia and the average summer climate of Minnesota. It is in Sitka district that the Treadwell gold mines are, and these are now yielding from $50,000 to $75,000 in gold bullion per month.

Alaska is a great island region. One of its archipelagoes is 300 miles from north to south and about eighty miles wide. It contains from 1000 to 5000 separate islands, and the aggregate area of these islands is more than 14,000 square miles. Six hundred miles further west there is another group which contains over 5000 square miles, and the total area of the islands of Alaska is larger than the state of Maine.

THE ALASKA MOUNTAINS

Alaska has the highest mountain peaks of the United States. It has volcanoes and glaciers, and many of these volcanoes are in active order. The glaciers of Alaska are finer than those of the Alps. There is one that extends fifty miles to the sea, and there ends in a perpendicular ice wall 300 feet high and eight miles broad. Thirty five miles above Wrangell, on the Stikine river, between two mountains 3000 feet high, there is a glacier forty miles long and four or five miles across at the base. It is from 500 to 1000 feet high and there are other glaciers throughout the territory from which great blocks containing hundreds of tons of ice are constantly breaking off and falling into the sea. The rivers of Alaska are among the finest of America. The Yukon is seventy miles wide across its five mouths, and at some points along its lower course one bank cannot be seen from the other. For the first thousand miles it is from one to five miles wide, and in some places it is twenty miles from bank to bank. It is navigable for 2000 miles, and is computed to be 3000 miles long.

EDUCATION IN ALASKA

A number of government schools have been established in Alaska, and an appropriation of $25,000 was made last year for this purpose. These schools are located from 100 to 1000 miles apart, and the teachers of only five schools are able to get a monthly mail. Many of the other schools receive a mail only three times a year and one or two are able to get and send letters only yearly. Only about 2000 people among the Alaskans speak English, and it will be seen what a difficult undertaking the education of such a people is. The Presbyterian missions had established a number of schools in the territory, and the government undertaking is connected with them. At Sitka, Mr. Jackson says, the government officials hindered his educational work and materially retarded it. He says the United States judges and others did not want the natives educated, and they did all they could to hinder it. There is an industrial school at Sitka, and a movement is under foot to educate the inhabitants so that they will be able to develop their territory, and at the same time become good citizens of them.

SALEM NOTES

SALEM, June 2

The public schools were dismissed yesterday for the summer vacation.

The H. A. C. band furnished free music for the firemen's entertainment last evening.

Hon. R. S. Strahan, supreme judge elect, visited the state departments yesterday.

S. D. Crockett, of Seattle, left for home yesterday after a brief visit among relatives in this city.

The election of a chief engineer by the fire department will be the next exciting event in this city.

Miles M. Miller, formerly of this city, is now a resident of Colfax, Washington territory, where he is in business.

The exodus to the seaside and coast will soon commence. Very many of our citizens will with their families spend their summer vacation at Yaquina bay.

The official election returns have not yet been received by the secretary of state from Baker, Curry, Grant and Union counties, and the official canvass is thus delayed until next week.

Sheriff Minto of this county has levied his little writ of attachment upon sundry property at Woodburn, belonging to the Oregonian Railway company limited, in default of the payment by them of sundry taxes amounting in the aggregate to $1125. The matter awaits future settlement.

The contracts for furnishing supplies to the Oregon insane asylum during the ensuing three months were awarded yesterday as follows: Coffee, crackers and spices, S. Farrar & Co.; groceries and miscellaneous, Jno. G. Wright; meats, D. C. Howard; drugs, Dan J. Fry; flour, Salem Flouring Mills Co.; dry goods, Jno. J. Dalrymple.

The man Bloxam who was sent up from Portland for the murder of Fisher was sometime since adjudged insane and transferred to the asylum. He made an attempt to escape a few days since, and the state authorities concluding there was perhaps too much method to his madness had him taken back to the penitentiary where he now languishes.

Reed's opera house was well filled last evening on the occasion of the literary and musical entertainment given under the auspices of the Alka Hesperian Literary society, for the benefit of the State Firemen's Tournament fund. Among the performers were many of our leading musicians, vocalists and elocutionists, and their renditions were without exception all but faultless, encores being frequent and well deserved.

The special election held yesterday upon the bridge question was one of the most enthusiastic and at the same time one of the most one-sided elections probably known in the history of the state. The H. A. C. band were out in full force and paraded the streets, while a drum corps were busily engaged the entire day in drumming up dilatory voters, and when at length the vote was counted and showed that out of 684 voters who by right of suffrage gave free expression to their sentiments, 663 were in favor of the construction of the bridge, the friends of the enterprise could but look at each other in complete surprise and wonder what the scare was all about, anyway.

The work on the capitol building is progressing in a most satisfactory manner, the corridors and legislative halls being prepared for the plasterers as rapidly as circumstances will permit and the gallery being placed in position. The board of public building commissioners have for several past had under consideration the matter of plastering the immense structure, and they have arrived at the conclusion that the interests of the state would be best served by rejecting all proposals heretofore made and furnishing necessary material and giving the matter of labor their personal supervision. Their experience in the construction of those portions of public work has been [illegible] crowned with success, and it is safe to presume that their conclusion will be justified upon the completion of this work.

DEATH OF T. B. ODENEAL

Hon. T. B. Odeneal, for many years a resident of this state, and who, during an active business life has occupied many positions of honor and trust, died at the Chemeketa hotel in this city last night from the effects of an attack of apoplexy which occurred but a few hours previous. Many who have known him in his better days will be pained to hear of his death, as he possessed many good qualities and was a man among men before misfortune overtook him. He was generous and warm hearted with his friends, and was well thought of in days of his prosperity. His youngest son was with him when at the last death relieved him of his pains and sufferings, and the elder son arrived here from Portland this morning, and in obedience to the father's oft repeated request, his wasted body will be laid at rest beside his wife at Corvallis, the funeral cortege having left here at 11 A. M. to-day. Kind friends who had known him in better days, were with him at the last, and fair hands in memory of a happy past to-day strewed his casket with floral tributes, and silently wept over an almost wasted life. He was a member of the Albany lodge of Workmen, his insurance policy of $2000 having been made out in favor of his daughter, at present in Washington, D. C., between whom existed continued devotion through weal and woe.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS

PORTLAND, June 2

Eighteen deeds were filed for record with the county clerk during the past week of an aggregate value of $43,868 33. The mortgages filed during the same period foot up $8,550 and those released $5010 0.

The business of the week under review shows an increase in volume of $13,20[illegible] 33 over that of the previous week. This excess of apparent business is due to the filing of a sheriff's deed in favor of J. Simon for $26,965, the property purchased being in Holladay's addition. The demand for real property is very limited just now, and would be buyers are awaiting a more favorable opportunity. The owner of the church lots corner of Third and Washington streets is said to be negotiating for lot 2 in the same block owned by Mrs. Smith with the expectation of, if successful, building a fine business block with a frontage of 100 feet on Third street.

The reported widening to a standard gauge of that portion of the Willamette valley railroad now under construction has materially stiffened the values of real property at the south end and owners are holding to the future for developments as well as profits.

HENRY WATTERSON'S DEPARTURE.

He Goes Abroad to Gain Strength, See his Daughter and Visit Boyd Winchester

New York Mail and Express

Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, with his wife sailed for Europe last Wednesday on the Normandie. A number of friends and admirers of the Kentucky journalist went aboard the ship and bade him good-by, with the wish that his trip would soon restore him to his old time vigor and health. He looked pale and the mere ghost of himself when a reporter for the Mail and Express met him in the cabin of the vessel a few minutes previous to his departure.

"I have been snatched as it were from the grave," he answered, when questioned about his long and dangerous illness. "It seems almost impossible that one can be so sick and then get up. Well, I am not well, but merely convalescing. My trip abroad is to regain my lost strength and see my daughter, who is attending school in France. I have no idea how long I shall remain. It all depends upon the state of my health. What portions of Europe shall I visit? I have not decided that yet. I shall travel perhaps on the continent and visit my old friend Boyd Winchester, in Switzerland."

"Will it be possible to get any political views from you before sailing?"

"No, I am not posted on current events. Why, I haven't read a newspaper in four months. I have been strictly attending to the business of gaining strength instead of getting political information. Besides, I do not feel in the frame of mind to talk politics. When I come back from Europe and get in harness once again, then I shall be in the condition to give my views."

INDIANA IN HOT WATER

The Faction Fights in the Democratic Party Liable to Result Disastrously

INDIANAPOLIS, June 16.—Bitter and uncompromising factional fights have divided the democratic party in Indiana against itself and at present a revengeful war is in progress which promises to result in the election of republican congressmen in at least four districts which have always given large democratic majorities. The Indiana democrats, it seems to be pretty clearly demonstrated, cannot stand prosperity such as has been afforded them by the election of Mr. Cleveland to the presidency. The trouble arises from an unsatisfactory distribution of the administration spoils, and a spirit of resentment, which pervades an active majority of the party's workers, is vigorously expressing itself in the form of organized movements to defeat the present democratic representatives in congress who are held responsible for the trouble, and who have made themselves objects of vengeance by securing, through questionable means, nominations for re-election.

Altogether the democratic party in Indiana is in a badly disrupted state, and although it is apparent that the cut throat policy that is being pursued will have no other result than a triumph of the republicans, the politicians seem to be powerless to put an end to the trouble and bring the fighting factions together.

A Live Issue Wanted

Pittsburg Dispatch

There has not been a time in the history of this country when there were as fine openings for a few good, live issues as the present.

The two great political parties have no end of trouble in keeping their lines from getting crossed and tangled and there seems to be no immediate prospect of getting them drawn tight enough to prevent "swinging crosses," as a telegraph lineman would say.

Over in Ohio a number of the old wheelhorses of both parties are going into the prohibition ranks. The only explanation that can be given for this is that there is no heavy hauling to be done in their own parties, and they cannot bear to draw wagons loaded with nothing but wind. The trained prize fighter does not like to beat the air.

Suggestive

New York Sun

Nothing wiser has been said to Mr. Cleveland since he was elected than the words of Col. McClure, the veteran and accomplished editor of the Philadelphia Times. "If there is no revival of business during your administration," said McClure to Cleveland in an interview not long after his election, "then your administration will be a failure, and the democratic party will be beaten in the election of 1888. But if there is a speedy and flourishing revival of business under your administration, then you will be successful and the democratic party will succeed in 1888."

A large portion of Mr. Cleveland's term of office has already passed away, and there is no revival of business yet, nor any clear prospect thereof.

Has Had Enough of Politics.

From an Interview with Ben Butler

"I have nothing more to ask of politics or politicians. My ambition now is not to rust out. I'm trying lawsuits, partly because I like these legal contests and partly for the rewards of my profession which, I am glad to say, are great enough to provide for my wants, so that I need not trespass upon the rights of my children. The practice of the law is to me like a game of chess. I win to-day and lose to-morrow, but the general average leaves me no cause to complain. With my present life I am entirely contented, and I have no inclination to disturb it to play at any other game. But I still keep an eye and an ear upon current events, and still have a penchant for looking at politics, though at long range."

The French Princes

Labouchere, London Truth

The sympathy felt for the French princes is confined to the people who are in the habit of frequenting their soirees, and to the scribes who celebrate their virtues. They ought to be expelled. Would Cromwell have ever dreamt of allowing Charles II. to hold a species of court in London, and to plot and intrigue in a London house against the government? No more than Bismarck allows the Duke of Cumberland to reside in Hanover or the king of Italy allows the ex king of Naples to reside in that city.

Watterson's Platform

Chicago Inter Ocean

The Hon. Henry Watterson is rusticating across the ocean, but his organ the Courier-Journal, gives his platform. It says, speaking of the defeat of the free-trade bill: "The democratic dog is not going to allow his tail to wag him. He will have it amputated first." The people will be glad to assist in the amputation, and make the cut close to the ears.

The American sugar refinery's two price lists marked up prices of white sugar [illegible]c per pound and brown grades from [illegible] to [illegible]c per pound over their previous list. The California sugar refinery advanced prices of both white and yellow sugars [illegible]c per pound on all grades. As the American refinery's latest list is now from [illegible]c higher than the California's list, a further advance is not unlikely to be made by the latter company. The demand for prime grades of Central American coffee continues good and considerable quantities are moving out of first hands. Some large lots of the common grades are said to be firmly held by importers with the expectation of a further advance. The new crop of Japan rice is now arriving, but most of the importations are going direct to the eastern market where prices rule higher for the first receipts of the new crop. There is a fair demand for China rice, but stocks are large and values are easy, as is also eastern rice.

The vessel that had [illegible] cargo of jute. Two other sail vessels are on the way from Calcutta or likely to be [illegible] for this season's business. In the meantime all the space in the Hong Kong steamers has been secured to bring bags. The steamer City of [illegible] 1 000 on the 20th, [illegible] 000 [illegible] and 500 bales jute [illegible]. This in the past six weeks the Hong Kong steamers have brought [illegible] 000 bags [illegible] to the syndicate and [illegible] 00 bales jute for the state factory at San Quentin. All the steamers which have consignments of bags for the syndicate. It is estimated that the supply for the season, including those carried over from last year, is about 43,000,000 to 44,000,000 bags. The wants of the market are thought to be much larger. In this lies one of the contingencies of the trade.

WOOL—The eastern markets continue firm and [illegible] in sympathy. Eastern markets are now [illegible] West [illegible] any other influence [illegible] to keep prices up [illegible]. At New York last week 50,000 lbs Oregon [illegible] probably an inferior grade [illegible].

[illegible] stocks and request [illegible].

CHICKENS—[illegible] $2[illegible]5 50.

SUNDAY, June 27.

[illegible] weather yesterday [illegible] It is usually a dry month [illegible] between two fires, rains will probably be followed by excessive heat. As has been stated, spring [illegible] all over the North [illegible] dry spring, we [illegible] Eastern Oregon [illegible] the North west.

SALMON—The Bremah is advertised for London [illegible]. The Oregon for San Francisco had [illegible] from [illegible] accounts the run has not improved to the extent expected a week and ten days [illegible] there is no doubt the output to date is [illegible] last year. Three canneries operated during the strike have probably put up as much as last year. All others [illegible] less, it being [illegible] at the Cascades are behind. Canners having traps and outside gear have done better than those operating boats only, the trap catch going to make up the deficit by boat. We are satisfied that the meagre information obtainable is not due to an unwillingness on the part of canners to give out figures, but that it is due to a general indifference. Those who contracted largely ahead are sore because of the [illegible], and those who have not sold are equally sore because of the unsatisfactory run. The telegraphed sale of Hapgood's noted in our San Francisco report is stated here to be correct. Barrel and dried salmon will be plentiful, supply as much has been done in this work. A canner tells us he still has hopes of an improvement, basing his belief upon the fact that spawn in those being caught is young and not at all advanced. This should indicate a late season and a more than ordinary July run.
